ment. Without vocabulary knowledge, words are just wordsâ€” without much meaning. If we are to help children take on seriously challenging texts, then we need to give them word and world knowledge to bring to these texts. Given that most oral vocabulary development grows from a massive immersion in the world of language, there is not a moment to waste.

The magic which poetry exerts upon us, is due to this quality and the rhythm combined therewith. It is stronger than what the words convey objectively â€” stronger even than reason with all its logic, in which we believe so firmly. The success of great speakers is not only due to what they say, but how they say it.
